THE LEGEND OF ZELDA

Nintendo will let a group of fans play the next Zelda early

- Nintendo will allow 500 fans to play the untitled Legend of Zelda game for Wii U far ahead of its launch.
- The game is set to launch sometime in 2017 for both the Wii U and Nintendo's mysterious NX console.
- Registration for the event begins on June 11th at 9 a.m. ET at the Nintendo store in New York.

5 Misagh REPLY

It is one movie split into two parts, both released the same month. It is a trend in Japan, ex: Rurouni Kenshin movies.

DestinyMe REPLY

I am not that big fan of Attack on Titan the anime series but the upcoming game looks like great fun!

18 Simonson REPLY

The movie doesn't follow the manga or anime at all. Character stories or backgrounds are changed.

The dialogue is horrible in most parts. I regret watching it.

1 Adelina Chu REPLY

Enough with the movie and game adaptations, just give us a second season of the anime.

Dying Light 2 Delayed To 2022

Dying Light 2 Stay Human is slated to be a step up from the first game, which we deemed a fantastic open-world, zombie-slaying experience back in 2015. The second game in the franchise got a bevy of gameplay trailers at Gamescom and a constant rollout of updates over the years. Sadly, delays are a natural part of this industry that can be necessary for various reasons. Sure, it's deflating for the player, but often dev teams feel the full brunt of it. Today, Techland announced that Dying Light 2 has been delayed to early 2022. CEO Pawel Marchewka provided some context for the major decision in an emailed statement.

"The team is steadily progressing with the production, and the game is nearing the finish line," Marchewka states. "The game is complete, and we are currently playtesting it. It is by far the biggest and most ambitious project we've ever done. Unfortunately, we've realized for us to bring the game to the level we envision, we need more time to polish and optimize it...We are sorry to keep you all waiting a little longer, but we want the game to meet your highest expectations on release, and we don't want to compromise on this."
